ABOUT THE CLASS

Street Level Policing taught by Officer James Petrucci, is a comprehensive course designed to equip police officers with the necessary skills to effectively police diverse jurisdictions. The class places significant emphasis on pedestrian encounters during traffic stops, consensual encounters with pedestrians and bicyclists, as well as proper techniques used in these situations—often overlooked by officers. It underscores the notion that even minor infractions can potentially lead to the discovery of more serious crimes such as drug and gun-related offenses, along with apprehending wanted felons. By highlighting the importance of addressing criminal elements in high-crime areas and enforcing laws to create safer communities, Street Level Policing ensures that officers are thoroughly prepared and confident in their ability to lawfully stop suspicious individuals. Additionally, students will learn how to utilize intelligence, enabling them to identify targets more efficiently. The class aligns with the broken windows theory, demonstrating that apprehending a suspect for a seemingly minor offense like jaywalking can effectively prevent subsequent incidents, such as retail theft or neighborhood burglaries. Attendees will be exposed to a wealth of dash camera and body camera footage, providing real-life examples of all topics discussed.

- Understand the purpose and importance of pedestrian and bicycle stops in relation to criminal interdiction
- Learn how to overcome common officer discomfort during stops and how to handle resistance from stopped individuals
 - Navigate state/local pedestrian and bicycle laws for effective enforcement
- Understand the goals of pedestrian and bicycle stops and the importance of clear communication and building rapport with individuals
 - Discuss signs of impairment or intoxication and how to use it to your advantage
 - Learn how to conduct successful mere encounters
 - Learn about current trends utilized by criminals
 - Develop skills in identifying targets and utilizing intelligence sources
- Learn techniques for identifying and policing high crime areas within your jurisdiction
- Familiarize yourself with relevant case law on high crime areas and pat-down searches
